Grieving for a pet, the story of love and loss, is a story that so many know all too well. The loss of a pet is a traumatic experience, which affects the entire family. It is also a subject that is often uncomfortable for many in our society. This book pushes past all that to get to the heart of grieving for your pet. Chaplain Jamie D. Watts, a pet parent himself, addresses both the social and emotional issues that come from the loss of a pet. Chaplain Watts is all too familiar with the loss of a beloved pet and will help guide you through the mourning process. He breaks it down in simple language, covering everything from the grief process, working with children, and a special section on the religious implications of pet loss. This little book is sure to be a handy guide that you will not only use yourself, but will pass on to friends and family to help them through their own journey of grief.
